A BRIEF LOOK AT INDONESIA

Having more than 2,000 hospitals and 9,000 clinics throughout 34 provinces with 1 hospital bed ratio of approx 850 inhabitants, Indonesia will be having more than 10% of the 60yr-old+ population by 2020. It already has the highest number of diabetes cases in the region. Frost & Sullivan indicated that Indonesia still envisions a significant improvement in healthcare infrastructure by attracting more investment and infrastructure development due to expected impact of the 2019 Jaminan Kesehatan Nasional (National Health Coverage) forged through the BPJS Health agency. Regulations permitting increased foreign investment in the healthcare sector will also be as substantial as approximately 90% of all medical equipments in Indonesia are yet fulfilled by imports. Indonesia's Ministry of Health predicted that the need for medical equipments and drugs will double or even triple in coming time.

The Economic Intelligence Unit notes that large private hospital groups are looking to expand their representation to provinces and retain shares of the medical tourism market – a yearly estimate of 600,000 Indonesians travelling abroad for medical reasons.

According to EIU, while equipped with 5% of National Expenditure in 2016, it is expected to grow at a 10.6% CAGR between 2016-2020, exceeding growth in BRIC countries. Business Monitor International (BMI) also suggested a projected growth in Indonesian medical devices market from est. USD 606.7mn in 2014 to USD 1.2bn in 2018. This puts Indonesia as top-15 fastest growing market for medical devices globally. These broadband investments will fill network coverage gaps in last-mile rural locations in the country by 2020.
